How a Nashville Barber Created a Sensation at the Springs.

A few days since a young barber of this city put his best garments in a hand valise and hied him away to one of the popular summer resorts of Tennessee, within less than a week's ourney of Nashville. He was fair to look upon, sported good harness, used omade and things with unsparing hand, and had acquired quite a reputation for agility and grace in tripping the light fantestic.

Upon arriving at the springs in question, he moved through the throng like a conquering hero. Susceptible school girls and even sentimental msidens of two "seasons" fell before the charms of those ambrosial locks, the graceful bearing and polished manner, and within an hour after his arrival, our knight of the lather brush was master of the situation and had no lack of partners for the daner One young lady was especially kind and as she was one of the most attractive ladies at the Springs, our discriminating and appreciative barber sought every opportunity to enjoy her socie-

This state of affairs continued for about twenty-four hours, when the young man's "profession" was discovered, causing a change to come over the spirit of his decam immediately. The young lady who had been the reipient of his marked attentions lost her interest in the society of the springs and departed for home on the first train .- Union and American.
